

Net zero performance tracking

Is this you?

You are a real estate asset owner, manager or investment manager who has set a net zero carbon pathway or commitment but are finding that tracking net zero performance is a challenge. As the industry advances, you might feel that your baseline was incorrect which means you're struggling to both meet disclosure requirements and stick to your original commitment.

Benefits abound

By taking away all confusion around the data and the rules of reporting, we will free you up to focus on the parts of your job that truly matter—implementing decarbonisation in your portfolios.

The world is changing

As our knowledge of the climate grows, there is a corresponding expansion in the number and complexity of reporting standards and rules. Emission categories which were excluded as de minimis suddenly enter the spotlight, while accepted calculation methodologies are adapted to reflect this change.

How we help

Our expert team stays abreast of all the technical changes in the industry, participating in working groups and working with governments and industry bodies to both understand and influence their developments. We will use this knowledge to review and, if necessary, re-baseline your original commitment. We can then help you set up effective data collection and reporting necessary to assess how you track against your targets.

verco

Find out more